Painting Juliet's Balcony

Theme of Friday night's Valentine Dance at the Avalon will be "Romeo and Juliet" and these members of Delta Zeta chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, have been painting and decorating for several evenings getting ready for their big night—the crowning of the Valentine Queen, dancing by the music of the Lancers and a midnight buffet. Designer of the large three-panel mural is Mary Bartrell (far left) standing with Elaine Stanley, Pratina George, Janet Noble (back to camera), and Brenda Stanley are all members of the sorority waiting to welcome couples to an evening of relaxation and fun.

Machine Undergoes Overhaul

Jack Burks (at right) and John Pearson (left) of the Appomattox Machine Works, Rt. 24, east of Appomattox, on Friday afternoon put the final adjustments to a Flat Bed Tortic Polishing Machine for the Titmus Optical Co. in Petersburg. This two-ton machine can polish 124 eyeglass lenses at a time, and was brought to Appomattox three weeks ago for a major overhaul. It was returned to Petersburg Monday by Anderson Trucking Co. Burks and his crew installed new drive belts, new chains, shafting, sprockets, a complete paint job. Biggest problem? removing jeweler's rouge, says Burks, a polliquid cleaner on the market can cut through it. Solution? They sandblasted the machinery clean. With two machines completed, the firm is looking for eight more like them, enough work to keep a polisher in the shop until summer time.

Spacers For A Polisher

Jim Cheatham, working at the turret lathe at Appomattox Machine Works is turning out a metal spacer, a replacement on a Flat Bed Polisher for the Titmus Optical Co. of Petersburg. Cheatham is part of the team that did a complete overhaul on complicated optical polishing machinery. He, John Pearson, Jack Burks and Eddie Megginson cleaned, repaired and replaced hundreds of parts for the polisher. This is their second such machine to service. Each one requires about three weeks for a complete renovation. Both Burks and Cheatham are Navy veterans where they learned the machinist's trade. Both have also been employed at Babcock and Wilcox, Lynchburg.
